WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 5, 1882.

A Perpetual Courtship.
The Mexicans of the wealthy or well-to-do classes have a custom in married life which seems to be a pretty one. Husband and wife have entirely separate apartments, and neither is expected to enter the apartments of the other except on invitation. When the husband desires the company of his lady in his apartment he writes a note of invitation in terms of the most formal and lofty politeness, incloses it in a perfumed envelope, seals it and sends it to her on a silver tray in the hands of a servant. The lady acknowledges the invitation in the same way, and if she accepts, which she is probably most likely to do, she appears at the door of his apartment at the appointed hour, in bridal costume, escorted by one or more of her ladies in waiting. She then retires. The husband receives her at the door, leads her to a little table, where he treats her to chocolate or tea, cakes, fruit, etc. In the midst of this apartment he has a room furnished in the most exquisite way he is capable of, which he holds sacred to his lady, and never occupies unless she is present. This room is his pride. He spares no expense to make it as unique and charming as possible. When the gentleman has received his lady in his apartment it is not proper to leave her until they have breakfasted, which does not usually occur until 9 o'clock.

After the lapse of some days—I do not know how many—equities require that the lady shall return the husband's compliment by a similar invitation, nicely sealed in a perfumed envelope on a silver tray. He acknowledges the invitation with many thanks, and if he accepts, which it is presumed he is quite sure to do, he first indulges in the bath, puts himself up in his best array, patronizes his perfume bottles and his pomades, and at the appointed hour appears promptly at the door of his lady's apartments. She is there to receive him dressed like a queen, wearing orange blossoms in her hair and on her bosom. She conducts him to a little table, where he is offered wine and cake or chocolate and cake or fruit. After this pleasant repast she regales him with songs and music on the guitar. She has in the midst of the apartment a room which she holds sacred to her husband, and which she never occupies unless he is present. It may be supposed that this sacred room is her pride above all things, and to adorn and watch over it the chief occupation and joy of her life. They remain together in the lady's apartment until breakfast, after which they both separate. There is a continual interchange of courtesies as a perpetual courtship. —Gladstone News.

NOTICE TO STATE TAX PAYERS.

City Treasurer's Office,
Room No. 2 Market Building,
Alexandria, Va., May 13th, 1882.
All persons who have not paid their State taxes for the year 1881, will please take notice that I am compelled to settle my accounts for that year with the State on the 15th of June, and to enable me to do so, must collect the taxes now unpaid, and unless these bills are paid by the 1st instant, I shall enforce their payment without further notice. Voters will bear in mind that they must pay their capitation tax for 1881, to entitle them to vote in the May and November elections. Merchants and others engaged in business, who have received certificates of their State licenses from the Commissioner of Revenue are hereby notified that under the law they are required to present the same to the collector and pay the amount. A failure to do so renders them liable to a fine for doing business without a license.
